

Well Done!

Triumphing over tough competition, these 80 pieces were selected as winners.

MORE THAN 480 entries were submitted to In-Print 2013, the only national printing contest exclusively for in-plants. After a full day of judging, 80 winning pieces were selected, from 34 different in-plants.

The big winners again this year were the University of North Texas, with nine awards (including four Gold) and the University of Oklahoma, with seven awards (five Gold). Also stepping forward this year were two West Coast in-plants: Washington State University, with six awards, and the University of Oregon, with five.

Other notable winners were Excellus BlueCross

BlueShield and Rochester Institute of Technology, which each earned four awards, and the University of Minnesota, Central Michigan University and the University of Delaware, which all won three.

For the first time in the contest's history, entries in the non-offset categories surpassed those in the offset group. More than 60 percent of entries were printed on non-offset devices.

Prizes will be awarded on June 5 during a ceremony at the IPMA conference, in San Mateo, Calif., at which time the Best of Show winners in the offset and non-offset categories will also be revealed.
